

Utilizing Humor to Advance Curriculum

with instructor Stuart Schwartzman, Ed.D.

Graduate Course Number EDUC 0595 3 Credits

The study of humor in the classroom will explore insights into brain functioning, personality differences, motivational strategies, incorporation into curriculum and connection to common core standards. Teachers should create an environment that fosters student achievement through meaningful activities. This course has as its goal the production of methods and materials that, employing humor, should enhance all curriculums. Conducted in a participatory, activity based atmosphere, teachers should return to their classes immediately ready to implement course objectives.
